in fumes of gin and other alcoholic vapors he'll come on this floor and give very expansive talks starting neither here nor there and winding up nowhere. Talking about everything and nothing. When he gets through it's like a snake so large that you can't detect the head from the tail, just a mass of coils. There are times when the members leave this body and go to some of these places and they imbibe freely of these devilish spirits and you don't recognize them after they've done it. They go through a change of character and personality. I can always tell when it's happened because those who tend to be morose and silent around me tend to become very open and talkative, not communicative because what they say doesn't make sense. Those who tend to be communicative and friendly some times become morose. So these beverages do not respect persons. They act the same on everybody. What I'm saying today is going to be my last talk against alcohol down here this session, with the exception of my motion to kill Senator DeCamp's bill. There is such a thing as overexposure. There is such a thing as repeating an argument to the point where it has no more effect. I think I'm rapidly reaching that point in this body on the question of liquor. Although a person can drink liquor day after day, after day and not become immune to its effects; I guess liquor has a different effect on the brain than intellectual discussion. Intellectual conversation produces callouses on the brain. The wisdom can no longer penetrate. Alcohol can always find its way there and will always have the same effect. I think that Senator R. Lewis' amendment, as much as its designed to benefit the consumer as he sees a benefit, should not be adopted. I don't want to see the consumer benefited in this respect. I am anti-consumer on this bill, therefore, I am anti-Senator Richard Lewis's amendment. I am for Senator Frank Lewis' exploited, de-humanizing, anti-social bill in its present form.

PRESIDENT: Senator Ralph Kelly.

SENATOR KELLY: Mr. President, I'm call for a Page.

PRESIDENT: Senator Lewis, do you care to close?

SENATOR R. LEWIS: Mr. President, I don't plan to get involved in a debate on the morals of using alcohol or not using alcohol. My concern here, since it is a legal business, it is duly licensed in the State of Nebraska. I think that we ought to recognize that the consumer does have some rights here. If the wholesaler is going to enjoy some benefits, I think it's only fair to pass these benefits on to the consumer. With that I would move adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT: The question is the adoption of Senator Richard Lewis' amendment. Would you please vote. Have you voted? Record. Senator Richard Lewis.

SENATOR R. LEWIS: I hate to do this but it looks like we better have a Call of the House. There's 17 not voting here.
